It is up to the athlete to raise sponsorship money for coach travel and lodging.
- Exposure Exposure Exposure! Exposure is the key to becoming a highly paid and desired professional fighter. You will be exposed as a television star in 100+ million American homes.
- You will gain world class MMA experience. You will be traveling and competing around the world. Being savvy in world travel is important to your future professional organizations.
- You will become a key component in the world wide movement to bring the sport of MMA to the Olympics.

What you need to know

- Your coach/gym, are welcome at all events. Should they choose to come, their travel and lodging expenses are their responsibility.
- Much like the NFL and other organized sports, you will be required to wear a team uniform consisting of shorts, mouth-guard and gloves.
- You will be interviewed for television. This will require your presence, and additional time at weigh ins, and during fight day. (Please be advised, this may interrupt your normal routine).
- Individual fighters from each team advance during the season. Your team does not have to win for you to advance.
- All team rosters/travel/athlete decisions are handled by the team owners, not the Fighters Source® league.
